Class A Truck Driver

Jesus Fernandez

“I thank CVOC for the opportunity they gave me to fulfill my dream and advance on my future”

Jesus Fernandez has demonstrated an intense drive to succeed in becoming a commercial truck driver. Jesus grew up in the Central Valley working in the fields along with his parents and siblings. From an early age, he realized he needed to do something else; something that would bring him financial stability and not be so physically demanding. As an adult, he ventured into a partnership promoting Spanish music and events and was quite successful for many years, but the industry changed. It became very competitive and was no longer profitable.

A few years ago, Jesus got into legal trouble and was incarcerated. He was released in 2017 and immediately started working in the fields again. Later, his friend, Jorge Hernandez offered him a job driving trucks. The interesting thing is that Jesus' current employer also was a CVOC truck driving student who eventually opened up his own trucking company. What an amazing success story! Jorge, a former CVOC student who opened his own trucking company and is now employing current CVOC students/graduates! To top it off, Jorge is the person who recommended Jesus come to CVOC to obtain his commercial trucking license!

Jesus graduated from CVOC on May 4, 2018 and was hired by Jorge Hernandez Transport, LLC June 22, 2018 making $18.00 an hour. Jesus now plans to purchase his own truck in the future and operate his own trucking business. Maybe he, too, will be employing future CVOC truck driving graduates!
